MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

I. INTRODUCTION

The Netflix Defendants’¹ motion (the “Motion”) posits that they should be able to avoid discovery on access and copying as a matter of fact on the basis they have a so-called production script (the “Production Script”) for the Rez Ball film (the “Infringing Work”) that well predates access. The Motion collapses before it leaves the starting gate. The Production Script and the Infringing Work are not the same, and the Infringing Work continued to be “created” or “authored” until it was in its final form of the film that was released – well after defendants had access to (at least one of them, admitted possession of) Plaintiffs’ script for The Gift of the Game (the “Original Work”). Even if the Production Script shows that many of the shared elements between the Original Work and the Infringing Work result from independent creation, that would not automatically insulate defendants from copyright infringement for directly lifting elements from Plaintiffs’ Original Work and inserting them into their Infringing Work, as the case appears. Nor would directly lifting elements from the Original Work and inserting them in the Infringing Work automatically render defendants liable for infringement. Discovery is necessary to see how much protectable content defendants lifted from Plaintiffs’ script and inserted into their Infringing Work. The Motion is a wolf (the attempt to avoid discovery on what and how much they copied from Plaintiffs’ script) in sheep’s clothing (the concern for judicial economy).

The Motion seeks bifurcation of discovery limited to a “prior” independent creation defense and leave to file an early summary judgment motion on the “prior” independent creation defense. Neither of these requests are viable because discovery

1 regarding independent creation in this case would not be dispositive and would still 2 require an analysis of access, disclosure and substantial similarity. It seems evident
3 that the Netflix Defendants are aware of evidence of actual copying before their film’s 4 release, and by this talismanic Motion, seek to have their obligation to produce it in 5 discovery simply disappear. The Motion is not well taken and should be denied.

6 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

7 Plaintiff Rob Grabow (“Grabow”) is an award-winning screenwriter, 8 filmmaker, actor and producer from Montana. (See Compl. (ECF #1), ¶ 18; see also 9 concurrently filed Declaration of Rob Grabow (“Grabow Decl.”) ¶ 2.) His previous 10 writing credits include the 2023 feature film The Year of the Dog and a short film 11 entitled Method. (Id.) Grabow began writing the script for the Original Work in 2022.
12 (Id. at ¶ 3.)

13 Defendant Brit Hensel (“Hensel”) is a cinematographer and director who 14 worked in the camera department for the Emmy-nominated FX television series 15 Reservation Dogs. (Id. at ¶ 5.) The series Reservation Dogs was co-written, 16 executively produced and directed by Defendant Sterlin Harjo (“Harjo”). (Id.) 17 Hensel’s sister, Taylor Hensel, is a director and producer who also worked in the 18 camera department for Reservation Dogs. (Id.) Hensel has admitted that she was in a 19 romantic relationship with Harjo. (See Hensel’s Answer (ECF #40) ¶ 22.)

20 After initially reaching out to Hensel on or about May 14, 2024, to gauge her 21 interest in joining the Original Work project and she in return expressed interest in 22 being attached to this project, Grabow sent his copyrighted script of the Original Work
23 to Hensel on May 27, 2024. (Grabow Decl. ¶ 6.) Hensel executed a Non-Disclosure 24 Agreement (“NDA”) in connection with her review of the script for the Original Work
25 (Id.) After months of communications related to the Original Work including Zoom
26 meetings and emails and sharing the script with Hensel’s sister, Taylor, at Hensel’s 27 suggestion – Hensel advised Grabow on August 8, 2024 that she and her sister were 28 no longer interested in being part of this project. (Id. at ¶¶ 6-10.)

1 Netflix released the film Rez Ball on September 27, 2024. Grabow was not 2 aware that anyone he had contacted regarding The Gift of the Game as potential cast 3 and crew had any direct ties to Rez Ball. (Id. at ¶ 11.) Shortly after Rez Ball's release, 4 Grabow watched the film and discovered many elements that were similar to his 5 Original Work, including the state championship final game sequence, which was 6 virtually identical to what he had written, and was not in a plethora of other basketball 7 movies Grabow had watched. (Id. at ¶ 14.) Thereafter, Grabow listened to Canyon 8 Dreams: A Basketball Season on the Navajo Nation by Michael Powell, the book that 9 the defendants cite as inspiration for Rez Ball and found that Rez Ball had more in 10 common with Grabow's Original Work in terms of protected elements than it did with 11 Canyon Dreams. (Id. at ¶ 15.) Grabow also found very little overlap between Canyon 12 Dreams and his Original Work. (Id.) Grabow made a detailed comparison between 13 the Rez Ball film and his Original Work and noted over 200 overlapping elements – 14 sequences, characters, themes, pacing, mood, setting, and even dialogue. (Id. at ¶¶ 16-15 23; see also Compl. ¶¶ 38-70.)

16 Grabow brought this action to protect his Original Work and the ability to make 17 it into a film. (Id. at ¶ 24.) After Grabow filed the lawsuit, the Netflix Defendants 18 provided a copy of the April 2023 Production script for Rez Ball (the "Production 19 Script") to Plaintiffs' counsel, subject to a confidentiality agreement. (Id. at ¶ 25.)
20 Grabow reviewed, analyzed and compared the Production Script for Rez Ball with the 21 Rez Ball film, and the Original Work and identified numerous similarities between 22 the Rez Ball film and the Original Work which were not present in the Production 23 Script. (Id.) It would have been possible, if not easy, for Defendants to have 24 implemented elements and concepts from the Original Work into the Rez Ball film in 25 the post-production process, including, but not limited to, by way of automated 26 dialogue replacement, voiceovers, narration, radio programming, live game 27 announcements, and additional photography such as pickup shots and reshoots. (Id.)

28

1 III. APPLICABLE COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT LAW

2 To prevail on a copyright infringement claim, plaintiff must show that (1) 3 plaintiff owns the copyright in the infringed work, and (2) the defendant copied 4 protected elements of the copyrighted work. Moonbug Ent. Ltd. v. BabyBus (Fujian)
5 Network Tech. Co., No. 21-CV-06536-EMC, 2024 WL 2193323, at *7 (N.D. Cal.
6 May 15, 2024). The second prong contains two separate components: copying and 7 unlawful appropriation, which are distinct concepts. Id.

8 “Because direct evidence of copying is not available in most cases, [a] plaintiff 9 may establish copying by showing that defendant had access to plaintiff’s work and 10 that the two works are ‘substantially similar’ in idea and in expression of the idea.”
11 China Cent. Television v. Create New Tech. (HK) Ltd., No. CV1501869MMAJWX, 12 2015 WL 12732432, at *9 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 7, 2015) (internal quotations and citations 13 omitted). “[T]he hallmark of unlawful appropriation is that the works share substantial 14 similarities. The Ninth Circuit uses a two-part test—an extrinsic test and an intrinsic 15 test—to determine whether two works are substantially similar.” Moonbug Ent. Ltd.
16 v. BabyBus (Fujian) Network Tech. Co., 2024 WL 2193323, at *8 (internal quotations 17 and citations omitted).

18 Under the extrinsic test, the trier of fact must use analytic dissection, and, if 19 necessary, expert testimony to determine whether any of the allegedly similar features 20 are protected by copyright. Id. The extrinsic test is an “‘objective test based on 21 specific expressive elements: the test focuses on articulable similarities between the 22 plot, themes, dialogue, mood, setting, pace, characters, and sequence of events in two 23 works.’” Id. (citation omitted).

24 After plaintiff succeeds on the extrinsic analysis test, the analysis moves on to 25 the intrinsic test, which is a subjective comparison that focuses on “‘whether the 26 ordinary, reasonable audience’ would find the works substantially similar in the ‘total 27 concept and feel of the works.’” Id. at * 15 (citations omitted). Both tests must be 28 satisfied for the works to be deemed substantially similar. Id.

1 IV. ARGUMENT

2 A. THE COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENT ANALYSIS AT ISSUE
3 MUST BE BASED UPON THE ORIGINAL WORK AND THE 4 REZ BALL* FILM, NOT THE PRODUCTION SCRIPT

5 The Netflix Defendants’ Motion is based on the erroneous premise that this 6 case hinges on the similarities between the April 2023 Production Script for Rez Ball
7 and the Original Work. The Netflix Defendants argue that they independently created 8 Rez Ball by April 2023, long before they first had access to the Original Work in 2024.
9 As such, they say, the law of prior independent creation is a complete defense that 10 would apply in this case and there is no need for discovery into issues of access or 11 copying.

12 However, the Netflix Defendants fail to acknowledge the fact that the 13 Production Script and the Rez Ball film—i.e., the Infringing Work—are not the same.
14 The Infringing Work was not released until September 27, 2024, and Plaintiffs allege 15 that defendants had access to the Original Work earlier in 2024. Therefore, the 16 Infringing Work was not completed before Defendants’ alleged exposure to the 17 Original Work, and the Production Script does not prove that the alleged infringing 18 elements were already part of the Infringing Work in early 2023. Contrary to the 19 Netflix Defendants’ assertion, the doctrine of prior creation would not defeat any 20 allegations of access or copying in this case.

21 In addition to Plaintiffs’ comparison of all of the works, Plaintiffs’ expert 22 consultant, David R. Ginsburg, completed an analysis and comparison of the 23 Production Script with the Infringing Work and the Original Work. (See concurrently 24 filed Declaration of David R. Ginsburg (“Ginsburg Decl.”) ¶ 6.) Based on Mr.
25 Ginsburg’s review, he identified numerous instances of verbal content and scene 26 disparities that were in the Infringing Work that were not in the Production Script.
27 (Id.) Such differences could have been introduced and edited into the Infringing Work 28 in the period of time between when Grabow shared the Original Work with Hensel

1 and the time the Infringing Work was released. (Id.) Therefore, it is possible for 2 Defendants to have implemented elements and concepts from the Original Work into 3 the Infringing Work in the post-production process, including but not limited to, by 4 way of voiceovers, narration, radio programming, live game announcements, editing, 5 and additional photography in a matter of weeks. (Id.) Accordingly, the changes, and 6 the timing of those changes, between the Production Script and the Infringing Work 7 would be highly relevant to a substantial similarity analysis. (Id. at ¶ 7.) Discovery 8 regarding these changes is necessary, as well as information from the editor of the Rez 9 Ball film, Jessica Baclesse, as to how and when these changes came to be and how 10 and when they were ultimately implemented into the final film. (Id.)

11 Even if the Production Script was shown to be authentic and establishes that 12 many of the similarities between the Rez Ball film and the Original Work were a 13 product of independent creation, that would not be dispositive of substantial similarity 14 or infringement by itself. (Id. at ¶ 8.) Any shared elements not shown to be of 15 independent creation must still be analyzed, vetted through discovery and weighed in 16 the substantial similarity analysis, including whether they resulted from copying as a 17 matter of fact. (Id.) The Netflix Defendants' assertion that by submitting and 18 analyzing a document ostensibly prepared in April 2023, all requirements of 19 disclosure and proof legally sufficient to disprove substantial similarity have been 20 satisfied, when in fact those very elements could have been added much later. (Id.)

21 B. THE CASE LAW CITED IN THE MOTION IS INAPPOSITE

22 The cases cited in the Motion are inapposite because the creation dates of the 23 original work and the alleged infringing work were established by undisputed facts.
24 In Christian v. Mattel, Inc., the court held that the district court's order imposing Rule 25 11 sanctions against plaintiff's attorney for filing a frivolous action claiming that 26 Mattel's Barbie dolls infringed the plaintiff's Claudene doll sculpture copyright was 27 not an abuse of discretion (though ultimately order was vacated and matter was 28 remanded for determination as to whether sanctions were based on attorney's

1 misconduct outside the pleadings as opposed to bringing a frivolous action). 286 F.3d
2 1118 (9th Cir. 2002). The district court determined that the entire Barbie doll, 3 including the configuration of the makeup painted on the doll, existed years before 4 the creation of the Claudene doll, and the Barbie dolls had clearly visible copyright 5 notices on their heads that pre-dated the Claudene doll. Id. at 1123. Thus, the 6 plaintiff's attorney had filed a meritless claim against Mattel as a reasonable 7 investigation by the attorney would have revealed there was no factual foundation for 8 plaintiff's copyright claim. Id. at 1124. In reaching its conclusion, the court stated that 9 "it is impossible to copy something that does not exist. Thus, if Mattel created its doll 10 sculptures before [plaintiff's company] created Claudene in 1994, it is factually and 11 legally impossible for Mattel to be an infringer." Id. at 1128.

12 In stark contrast, here, the Original Work did exist before the Infringing Work 13 was completed and released. It is therefore possible for the Infringing Work to have 14 copied protected elements from the Original Work. Discovery is necessary to 15 determine, among other things, who had access to the Original Work and when certain 16 elements were added to the Infringing Work.

17 Similarly, Grubb v. KMS Patriots, L.P., 88 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 1996), is factually 18 distinguishable. In Grubb, the district court granted summary judgment for defendants 19 on plaintiff's claims of copyright infringement of his unsolicited NFL logo design 20 submission for the Patriots. 88 F. 3d at 2. After considering the evidence, the district 21 court found that (1) plaintiff failed to show that the alleged copier, Loh, had access to 22 plaintiff's work, and (2) Loh composed his logo design independently of plaintiff's 23 design. Id. Specifically, the undisputed evidence consisting of computer software 24 timesheets (that could not be backdated) and Loh's deposition testimony established 25 that Loh had finished designing his logo by February 4, 1993, and defendants did not 26 receive plaintiff's sketch until February 9, 1993. Id. at 5. Because the court concluded 27 that Loh composed his design prior to plaintiff's work, the appellate court did not go 28 further to consider reasonable access or substantial similarity. Id. at 5-6.

1 Here, the parties have just begun the discovery process. (See concurrently filed 2 Declaration of Devin A. McRae (“McRae Decl.”), ¶ 2.) There is no undisputed 3 evidence establishing that the Infringing Work, i.e., the Rez Ball film, was completed 4 before the Original Work. The Production Script and the Infringing Work, i.e., the 5 completed Rez Ball film, are different, and the completion of the Infringing Work 6 occurred after access. Thus, as with the Christian v. Mattel case, Grubb is not 7 persuasive to support the Netflix Defendants’ argument that their independent 8 creation defense is ripe, discrete or case-dispositive at this point in this case.
9 Significantly, none of the Netflix Defendants’ cases support the proposition that 10 simply because an idea was the product of independent creation along with certain 11 but not complete expression (i.e., the Production Script), that it automatically, as a 12 matter of law, precludes liability for infringement after the fact of the initial creation.

13 C. THE MOTION IS BASED ON THE PRESUMPTION THAT THE 14 PRODUCTION SCRIPT IS AUTHENTIC AND IMPERVIOUS TO 15 BEING CHALLENGED

16 Additionally, the Motion is based on the presumption that the Production Script 17 is authentic and is the exact version that was created in April 2023. The Netflix 18 Defendants baldly assert that they “have already provided Plaintiffs with a production 19 script, which proves that the alleged infringing elements were already part of Rez Ball 20 in early 2023.” (ECF No. 44-1 at p.6.) However, Plaintiffs do not need to accept at 21 face value the Netflix Defendants’ representations about the content and date of the 22 Production Script, and an unauthenticated, unverified script proves nothing for the 23 following reasons:

- 24 • The Netflix Defendants presenting the Production Script are the same 25 defendants who are believed to have knowingly purloined copyrighted 26 material.
- 27 • The single Production Script that the Netflix Defendants provided seems 28 to have come from an in-house server operated and controlled by the Netflix

1 Defendants with both sender and receiver appearing to have in-house Netflix
2 domains belonging to and under the control of the Netflix Defendants. (Grabow 3 Decl. ¶ 29.)

4 • The Production Script was provided informally and does not include any 5 attestation regarding authenticity. (Id.)

6 • There has been no opportunity to cross-examine or otherwise 7 independently verify the content or date represented in the Production Script.
8 (Id.)

9 In order to validate that the Production Script is in fact an authentic version of 10 the script as it existed in April 2023, Plaintiffs would need to conduct discovery 11 including, but not limited to, obtaining the subsequent versions of the script such as 12 the versions shared with the film editor and documents relating to the post-production 13 and editing process (automated dialogue replacement, voiceovers, narration, radio 14 programming, live game announcements, and additional photography) to determine 15 which film elements existed as of April 2023 and which ones were added thereafter.

16 Even if the Netflix Defendants’ representations about the Production Script – 17 which may or may not be true – are to be believed, the Production Script does not 18 account for all overlapping, protected elements that exist between the Original Work 19 and the Infringing Work. Therefore, the Netflix Defendants’ remarkable assertion that 20 “[t]here is no need for the Court to wade into Plaintiffs’ chain-of-events theory of 21 access or allegations of copying when the evidence confirms that Rez Ball was created 22 almost one year before the alleged access occurred” should be disregarded.

23 D. PLAINTIFFS ARE ENTITLED TO CONDUCT DISCOVERY ON 24 ALL OF THEIR CLAIMS

25 The Netflix Defendants claim that their prior independent creation defense 26 would dispose of Plaintiffs’ claims for interference with contractual relations and 27 prospective economic relationships as well. They also argue the prior independent 28 creation defense would dispose of Plaintiffs’ sole claim against Hensel for breach of

1 the non-disclosure agreement because it “knocks down” Plaintiffs’ claim that Rez Ball 2 is a product of copying.

3 As addressed above, the Netflix Defendants’ arguments are all based on the 4 faulty premise that the existence of the Production Script would somehow insulate 5 them from copying elements in Plaintiffs’ script and inserting them into the finished 6 film, the Infringing Work. Prior independent creation here is not as clear-cut as the 7 Netflix Defendants portray it to be, and discovery is still necessary to determine if and 8 when additional protected elements from the Original Work were added to the 9 Infringing Work, if they did not exist in the Production Script. Further, now that 10 Defendants have answered the Complaint, Plaintiffs are entitled to conduct discovery 11 on all of their claims and determine if, when, and to whom Hensel disclosed 12 information from the Original Work to support Plaintiffs’ claims against Hensel, as 13 well as the Netflix Defendants. The Netflix Defendants have no valid argument as to 14 why Plaintiffs should be deprived of those rights.

15 E. THE BIFURCATED DISCOVERY PROPOSED BY THE 16 NETFLIX DEFENDANTS WOULD NOT BE EFFICIENT OR 17 CONSERVE RESOURCES

18 Plaintiffs are amenable to phased discovery as long as the discovery includes 19 the ability to conduct discovery relating to all Plaintiffs’ liability claims and any 20 asserted defenses. The Netflix Defendants’ proposal to bifurcate discovery on the 21 issue of prior independent creation would not dispose of all of Plaintiffs’ claims. The 22 Netflix Defendants argue that prior independent creation is a discrete defense that has 23 little-to-no overlap with other claims and issues in this case. While that may be true 24 in other cases, that is not true here. As addressed above, the Netflix Defendants are 25 basing their argument on the erroneous premise that the infringing work is the April 26 2023 Production Script. Rather, the Infringing Work is the Rez Ball film that was 27 released on September 27, 2024, which contains protected elements from the Original 28 Work that defendants had access to before it was released. Consequently, Plaintiffs

1 would need to conduct discovery as to Defendants’ access to the Original Work, all 2 versions of the Rez Ball script, all documents provided to the film editor, and all 3 documents relating to the post-production and editing process to determine which film 4 elements existed as of April 2023 and which ones were added thereafter and 5 subsequent to access.

6 Unlike the cases cited in the Motion, bifurcation as proposed by the Netflix 7 Defendants would not streamline the case because discovery as to the issues of 8 creation, access, interference and substantial similarity are not discrete and separable 9 in this case. For example, in Zahedi v. Miramax, LLC, the court found that bifurcation 10 was appropriate because it involved the straightforward issues of copyright ownership 11 and statute of limitations. 2021 WL 3260603, at * 1 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 24, 2021). In so 12 finding, the court noted that “[b]ifurcation ‘is the exception rather than the rule of 13 normal trial procedure’ within the Ninth Circuit” and that bifurcation of the trial does 14 not necessarily require bifurcation of discovery. Id. The court further stated that “this 15 Court generally does not endorse bifurcated discovery proceedings...” Id. at *2.

16 While Plaintiffs do not generally oppose bifurcation of the case, any bifurcation 17 would need to include the full scope of liability to be addressed in the first phase as 18 all of the claims and issues overlap in determining whether there were protected 19 elements that were taken from the Original Work and used in the final version of the 20 Rez Ball film. Therefore, and as in the case, Moreno v. NBCUniversal Media, LLC, 21 cited in the Motion, Plaintiffs are amenable to bifurcate discovery into phases for 22 liability and damages. 2013 WL 12123988, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2013 (finding 23 that legal and factual issues relating to liability and damages and the evidence relevant
25
26
27
28

1 to those issues were distinct and separable).^{2, 3}

2 F. A MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT IS ONLY PROPER 3 AFTER PLAINTIFFS HAVE HAD A CHANCE TO FULLY 4 CONDUCT DISCOVERY

5 The Netflix Defendants request leave to file an early summary judgment on 6 their prior independent creation defense. For the reasons discussed above, the issue of 7 independent creation would require more discovery than suggested by the Netflix 8 Defendants and would not fully dispose of the matter. If, after Plaintiffs have had an 9 opportunity to fully conduct discovery, they determine that there is no reasonable 10 basis to maintain any of their claims, then Plaintiffs have no issue with voluntarily 11 dismissing those claims that are not supported by the evidence. Until then, the Netflix 12 Defendants' attempt to wall off discovery concerning the time period after the Rez 13 Ball Production Script was created in April 2023 is inappropriate. Plaintiffs are 14 entitled to obtain discovery in the form of documents, e-discovery, and deposition 15 testimony as to the changes made between the Production Script and the Infringing 16 Work. The Netflix Defendants' attempt to prevent Plaintiffs from conducting 17

18 ² The Netflix Defendants assert in the Motion that Plaintiffs' failure to attach the 19 Original Work to the Complaint suggests that attaching it would have been 20 detrimental to Plaintiffs' claims. However, unlike the case in Esplanade Prods., Inc.
21 v. Walt Disney Co., 2017 WL 5635024, at *10 (C.D. Cal. July 11, 2017) cited in the 22 Motion, Plaintiffs have sufficiently described the basics of the Original Work in the 23 Complaint. See Hardwell v. Parker, No. CV219100DMGPVCX, 2022 WL
24 16894520, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 25, 2022) (finding that plaintiff sufficiently 25 described the basics of his screenplay and court took plaintiff's allegations as true in 26 denying motion to dismiss). This is not a motion to dismiss. All the defendants chose 27 to answer instead of moving to dismiss and therefore the recitation of authorities 28 related to motions to dismiss in this Motion is misplaced.

³ The Motion also cites the case of Kids, LLC v. Dollar, 2015 WL 11117074 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 10, 2015), in which the court expressly stated: This Order is not intended for publication. Nor is it intended to be included in or submitted to any online service such as Westlaw or Lexis." 2015 WL 11117074, at *10.

1 appropriate discovery at this stage suggests that the Netflix Defendants have 2 something to hide, and their request to limit Plaintiffs' ability to seek the truth should 3 be denied.

4 V. CONCLUSION

5 For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court deny 6 the Netflix Defendants' Motion in its entirety.
